From the Pastor's Desk

*"O little flock, fear not the foe who madly seeks your overthrow;
Dread not his rage and pow'r.
And though your courage sometimes faints, his seeming triumph o'er God's saints
Lasts but a little hour."*

- "O Little Flock, Fear Not the Foe," Lutheran Service Book #666

I love that our hymnal, Lutheran Service Book, chose the hymn above for that number. Of course, the number "666" is mentioned in the book of Revelation as being the number associated with "the beast," commonly called "the antichrist." I remember an old Saturday Night Live skit where John Belushi played Damien, the son of Satan from the 1976 movie The Omen. The other characters in the skit were concerned as to "Damien's" true identity, so someone says, "Check his forehead! See if he has the mark...666!" So someone leans over the back of the chair in which John Belushi is sitting, pulls back his hair from his forehead...but viewing it upside down declares, "No! It says 999!"

Perspective affects how we view things such as "antichrist," "wars and rumors of wars," and "the end times." Most of the world views such things as nonsense and the stuff of jokes and late-night variety shows. Meanwhile, some within the Church find themselves terror-stricken at the thought of such things. Perhaps you as well have found yourself anxious over "the state of things." Indeed, evil is around us, particularly in our culture: sexual perversion and the corrupting of God's gift of marriage...political division and hostilities...a ballot proposal in Michigan that is trying to codify into law the murder of the unborn at every stage of pregnancy...nonsensical ideologizing over gender...fighting over what is going on in our schools. It would be easy for Christians who desire good things for our world to throw up their hands in despair! On the one hand, it is sinful to look at such things and say, "Nothing to see here!" or—even worse—to celebrate these things. On the other hand, it is just as sinful to fall into hopelessness because our fallen world is exactly that...fallen and broken.

Evil is real because Satan is real. But Christ is also real. The One who has broken Satan's power by His cross and triumphed over the grave is why the "little flock" need not fear "the foe." The Church walks a "middle way"—if you will—between the denial of Satan's power and the fear of the same. The Church knows Satan is real and that he wages deadly war against the saints of God. But the Church also knows Christ stands on her side as her "champion," in the words of Martin Luther's hymn "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God."

In the First Reading for Reformation Day, which we'll hear on Sunday, October 30th, St. John details a vision from "Revelation 14" of an "angel flying directly overhead, with an eternal gospel to proclaim to those who dwell on earth, to every nation and tribe and language and people." (Revelation 14:6, ESV) Johannes Bugenhagen, Martin Luther's pastor, famously preached during Martin Luther's funeral that Luther himself was that angel described in Revelation 14 with the "eternal gospel." We don't know that for sure, but we do know that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is eternal. The Lutheran Reformation recovered the comfort of the Gospel of Christ in a time where confessing the truth of God's Word certainly brought the attacks of Satan in many forms. The hymn, "O Little Flock, Fear Not the Foe" was a post-Reformation hymn by Jacob Fabricius that boldly declared the middle way between denial of evil and the fear of evil that we as Christians walk...just as in the days of Reformation 500 years ago. Fear not the foe, dear Christians! "Our vict'ry has been won; the Kingdom ours remaineth!" (LSB #656, st. 4)

LWML-LADIES' GUILD

"Serve the Lord with Gladness"

With the fall season in full swing—kids back in school, Sunday School, sports, adults enjoying fall colors & all, we can really appreciate the beauty God has created for us.

LWML had their 1st fall meeting—conducted by Gloria S. in the absence of Pres. Caren. Barb C. opened with devotions: "Jesus Be My Vision" and shared a banner that was supposed to be used at the National Conv. NOT held in Lexington Ky because of Covid! Bible Study: 1st of two part on Lord's Prayer and the LWML pledge.

At the No. Wis. Conv. We celebrated 80 years of God's grace, and they asked us "What's your 80?" Our Redeemer gals decided to collect 80 (or more) new socks and mittens (slightly used and in good shape) for the 4-6 year old's @ Breitung Twp. Head Start preschool, Kingsford @ Willis Center. Teachers expressed great need as children often come to school with wet/cold hands and feet. All in the congregation are welcome to add to our collection baskets in the Narthex. They will be delivered to the school after our Oct. 10th meeting.

Barb C. may be attending the Zone 2 Fall Rally in Laurium on Oct. 1st and will give a report.

Oct. 2nd is LWML Sunday. Our Ladies will be greeting and handing out flyers of accomplishments and upcoming grants to be attained. They will also serve cake and coffee. Our mites support grants—25% to National & 75% to NW Dist. It is truly awesome what our pennies, nickels, dimes and dollars achieve when we do it together.

Oct 10th is our next reg. LWML meeting at 1 p.m. in the Fellowship Hall! We'd love to see some new smiling faces at the meeting and share our Christian love.

Also, sincere thanks for all the expressions of love and sympathy and prayers to my family and I in the loss of my son Perry-husband, father, friend to all. He will be sadly missed.

Upcoming events:

Oct. 2—9 a.m. LWML Sunday

Oct. 10—1 p.m.— meeting

What Is Breast Cancer? Breast cancer is a type of cancer that starts in the breast. It can start in one or both breasts. Cancer starts when cells begin to grow out of control. Breast cancer occurs almost entirely in women, but men can get breast cancer, too. It's important to understand that most breast lumps are benign and not cancer (malignant). Non-cancer breast tumors are abnormal growths, but they do not spread outside of the breast. They are not life threatening, but some types of benign breast lumps can increase a woman's risk of getting breast cancer. Any breast lump or change needs to be checked by a health care professional to find out if it is benign or malignant (cancer) and if it might affect your future cancer risk. See Non-Cancerous Breast Conditions to learn more.

Breast cancers can start from different parts of the breast. The breast is an organ that sits on top of the upper ribs and chest muscles. There is a left and right breast and each one has mainly glands, ducts, and fatty tissue. In women, the breast makes and delivers milk to feed newborns and infants. The amount of fatty tissue in the breast determines the size of each breast.

Breast cancer can spread when the cancer cells get into the blood or lymph system and then are carried to other parts of the body. The lymph (or lymphatic) system is a part of your body's immune system. It is a network of lymph nodes (small, bean-sized glands), ducts or vessels, and organs that work together to collect and carry clear lymph fluid through the body tissues to the blood. The clear lymph fluid inside the lymph vessels contains tissue by-products and waste material, as well as immune system cells.

The lymph vessels carry lymph fluid away from the breast. In the case of breast cancer, cancer cells can enter those lymph vessels and start to grow in lymph nodes. Most of the lymph vessels of the breast drain into:

- Lymph nodes under the arm (axillary lymph nodes)
- Lymph nodes inside the chest near the breastbone (internal mammary lymph nodes)
- Lymph nodes around the collar bone (supraclavicular [above the collar bone] and infraclavicular [below the collar bone] lymph nodes)

If cancer cells have spread to your lymph nodes, there is a higher chance that the cells could have traveled through the lymph system and spread (metastasized) to other parts of your body. Still, not all women with cancer cells in their lymph nodes develop metastases, and some women with no cancer cells in their lymph nodes might develop metastases later.

There are many different types of breast cancer. The type is determined by the specific kind of cells in the breast that are affected. Most breast cancers are carcinomas. The most common breast cancers such as ductal carcinoma in situ (DCIS) and invasive carcinoma are adenocarcinomas, since the cancers start in the gland cells in the milk ducts or the lobules (milk-producing glands). Other kinds of cancers can grow in the breast, like angiosarcoma or sarcoma, but are not considered breast cancer since they start in different cells of the breast.

A risk factor is anything that increases your chances of getting a disease, such as breast cancer. But having a risk factor, or even many, does not mean that you are sure to get the disease.

Certain breast cancer risk factors are related to personal behaviors, such as diet and physical activity. Other lifestyle-related risk factors include decisions about having children and taking medicines that contain hormones.

Drinking alcohol is clearly linked to an increased risk of breast cancer. The risk increases with the amount of alcohol consumed. Women who have 1 alcoholic drink a day have a small (about 7% to 10%) increase in risk compared with those who don't drink, while women who have 2 to 3 drinks a day have about a 20% higher risk. Alcohol is linked to an increased risk of other types of cancer, too. Being overweight or obese after menopause increases breast cancer risk.

Before menopause, a woman's ovaries make most of her estrogen, and fat tissue makes only a small part of the total amount. After menopause (when the ovaries stop making estrogen), most estrogen comes from fat tissue. Having more fat tissue after menopause can raise estrogen levels and increase the chances of getting breast cancer.

Women who are overweight also tend to have higher blood insulin levels. Higher insulin levels have been linked to some cancers, including breast cancer. Evidence is growing that regular physical activity reduces breast cancer risk, especially in women past menopause. The main question is how much activity is needed. Some studies have found that even as little as a couple of hours a week might be helpful, although more seems to be better.

Women who have not had children or who had their first child after age 30 have a slightly higher breast cancer risk overall. Having many pregnancies and becoming pregnant at a young age reduces breast cancer risk. Most studies suggest that breastfeeding may slightly lower breast cancer risk, especially if it continues for a year or more. But this has been hard to study, especially in countries like the United States, where breastfeeding for this long is uncommon. Some birth control methods use hormones, which might increase breast cancer risk.

There is no sure way to prevent breast cancer. But there are things you can do that might lower your risk. Many risk factors are beyond your control, such as being born female and getting older. But other risk factors can be changed and may lower your risk.

Get to and stay at a healthy weight: Both increased body weight and weight gain as an adult are linked with a higher risk of breast cancer after menopause. The American Cancer Society recommends you stay at a healthy weight throughout your life and avoid excess weight gain by balancing your food intake with physical activity.

Be physically active: Many studies have shown that moderate to vigorous physical activity is linked with lower breast cancer risk, so it's important to get regular physical activity. The American Cancer Society recommends that adults get at least 150 to 300 minutes of moderate intensity or 75 to 150 minutes of vigorous intensity activity each week (or a combination of these), preferably spread throughout the week. Getting to or exceeding the upper limit of 300 minutes is ideal.

Avoid or limit alcohol: Alcohol increases risk of breast cancer. Even drinking small amounts of alcohol has been linked with an increase in risk. It is best not to drink alcohol at all. For women who do drink, they should have no more than 1 alcoholic drink a day. A drink is 12 ounces of beer, 5 ounces of wine, or 1.5 ounces of 80-proof distilled spirits (hard liquor).

LCMS- Stewardship-Ministry-Newsletter Article—October

“We Are All Beggars”

In the early morning hours of Feb. 18, 1546, Martin Luther closed his eyes forever. Before that happened, the hand that hammered the 95 Theses into the door of the Castle Church in Wittenberg on Oct. 31, 1517, penned its final words: “We are all beggars. This is true.” And this is the truth that our Lord says makes you free.

Irony, isn't it? In order to be free, you must be a beggar. You must be utterly dependent and reliant upon God. This makes us uncomfortable – the way we're uncomfortable when someone gets us a Christmas present when we haven't gotten them one. We feel we owe them. And we don't like being in someone's debt like that.

But what Luther would remind us is that we are all indeed beggars. And we're not just anyone's beggars. We're God's beggars. Christ came for sinners. He came to seek and save the lost. He came to heal the sick and raise the dead. He came for sinners, and He dwells only with sinners.

If we are to be where He is, we must be willing to be counted among the lost, the sick, and the dead. We must be willing to be beggars. We must cry out for mercy, for grace, and for his undeserved love and kindness. We must be dependent solely on Him and what He gives.

And here's the beauty: He gives us everything. Everything. Forgiveness of sins, salvation from death and the devil, and eternal life. This isn't because of any worthiness or merit in us. It is because of His divine goodness, mercy, and grace. On account of Christ's death and resurrection, the Father forgives you, saves you, and is pleased with you. You receive His love, His righteousness, His holiness, His acceptance, and His inheritance. We are all beggars. This is true.

This is the heart and soul of Christianity and the lifeblood of the Christian Church. God justifies us and declares us innocent and righteous by His grace received through faith for the sake of Christ. This isn't because of our works but because of His work on the cross. We, who once were enemies of God, are reconciled to Him and made to be His children.

This is what Luther pointed us to when He took up his pen for the last time and scribbled “We are all beggars. This is true.” We are beggars, but we are beggars of the God who does not ignore us and who doesn't pass by us on the other side. We are beggars of the One who descended from heaven to make His dwelling with sinners.

We are beggars of Him who deigns to dwell with us, among us, and – yes – still in us by grace for Christ's sake. For in the bread and cup that we bless we share together with Christ and each other the riches of God's grace. The riches of this grace – the Gospel in sermon and absolution, in Baptism, and in Holy Communion – are so inexhaustible that our cups overflow. We, who are God's beggars, are inexhaustibly satisfied, and we have something to give back in thanksgiving and praise.
